CHBA – Alberta Welcome New CEO Donna Moore

EDMONTON – The Canadian Home Builder’s Association – Alberta (CHBA – Alberta) is pleased Donna Moore has accepted the position of CEO. The appointment was announced during the Annual General Meeting held in conjunction with BUILD 2016, the Association’s annual conference, Sept. 15-18, in Jasper, Alberta.

“Donna’s three decades as an innovative association executive and effective industry advocate will provide CHBA – Alberta with the strong leadership that’s needed on major provincial issues. These include the Municipal Government Act review, City Charters, builder licensing and carbon levies. Donna also played a key leadership role in the successful amalgamation of CHBA - Calgary Region and UDI Calgary. This will be valuable experience during discussions with the Urban Development Institute – Alberta over a potential amalgamation,” said Ryan Scott, President, CHBA – Alberta.

Moore recently announced her resignation as co-CEO of the CHBA – UDI Calgary Region. She replaces Jim Rivait as CEO of CHBA – Alberta.

“I have always been proud to be part of CHBA and am honoured by the opportunity to serve the Association’s more than 1,600 Alberta members in this new role. I look forward to continuing to build positive relationships with government decision makers and stakeholders to achieve the vision of A Home for Every Albertan,” said Moore.

The Canadian Home Builders' Association – Alberta (CHBA – sAlberta) is the voice of the residential construction industry in the province. It represents over 1,600 business members including new home builders, renovators, developers, trade and supply companies, and professional services.
